Standards of physical therapist practice

The World Confederation for Physical Therapy (WCPT) recognises the absolute importance of developing and documenting agreed standards for the practice of physical therapy. These standards are necessary to:

- demonstrate to the public that physical therapists are concerned with the quality of the services provided and are willing to implement self-regulatory programmes to maintain that quality
- support entry level physical therapist professional education
- facilitate continuing professional development
- guide practitioners in the contemporary, evidence-based conduct and evaluation of their practices
- provide governments, regulatory bodies and other professional groups with background information about the professional practice of physical therapy
- effectively communicate with members of the profession, employers, other health professions, governments and the public

WCPT recognises the diverse social, political and economic environments in which physical therapy is practised throughout the world.

WCPT encourages its member organisations to:

- utilise WCPT's guideline for standards of physical therapy practice as appropriate <sup>1</sup>
- develop specific standards for physical therapy practice if necessary to suit prevailing circumstances or political environment, assuring they are in keeping with WCPT guidelines
- consider the following principles in the process of developing standards:
  - reflect the values, conditions and goals necessary for the continuing advancement of the profession
  - base values on valid principles and make them measurable
  - design standards to help the profession meet the changing needs of the community
  - base standards upon clear definitions of the scope of practice and accountability
  - make standards sufficiently broad and flexible to achieve their objectives and at the same time permit innovation, growth and change
  - subject standards to regular review with revision as required
- set national practice standards in the following areas:
  - administration and practice management
  - education
  - informed consent
  - management of the patient/client
  - quality assurance
  - support personnel
  - communication (eg digital, email, social media, written)
  - documentation
  - ethical behaviour

- legal
- personal/professional development
- research
