Physical therapist practice specialisation

The World Confederation for Physical Therapy (WCPT) supports member organisations' leadership and advocacy to influence national policies on practice specialisation, where such activity is considered by them to benefit the public and the profession by promoting high standards of physical therapy. In line with the WCPT policy statement on advanced physical therapy practice, practice specialisation needs to be distinguished from advanced practice. While physical therapists who are advanced practitioners are normally specialists; specialist physical therapists may not be advanced practitioners. ¹

WCPT wishes to harmonise and co-ordinate the development of practice specialisation by adopting consistent principles, definitions and guidelines.

WCPT advocates that member organisations should encourage and support the following.

- The qualification of a physical therapist specialist includes a formal process for testing and acknowledging in-depth clinical knowledge and skills of the speciality with the expectation that the formal process is fully documented.
- A physical therapist demonstrates in-depth clinical competence in their speciality by obtaining formal recognition of his/her knowledge and skills through a member organisation or accredited agent.
- Specialisation is not to be considered, or implied, to mean a limitation on practice. The field of activity recognised as physical therapy will remain open to all appropriately qualified physical therapists, both specialist and non-specialist, practising within their respective levels of competence.
